ROCKFORD, ILL. IS TORNADO SWEEPED, 6 KILLED

STORM TORE PATH THROUGH S. E. SECTION

HOSPITAL IS CROWDED WITH 60
OTHERS SERIOUSLY INJURED

300 HOMES DESTROYED IN THE
STRICKEN AREA. 1,200 PEOPLE
HOMELESS

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 15.—(UP)—Rockford today turned all its energies to the task of clearing away the wreckage and caring for the injured and homeless left in the path of the tornado which yesterday tore a path through the southeast section of the city.

Relief workers labored unhampered for the first time since the catastrophe, with the coming of daylight. Torrential rains had slowed the work immediately after the twister swept down on the industrial district, and then darkness rendered the crews almost helpless.

The mass of twisted material, which had been the three-story plant of the Rockford Furniture Company, presented the greatest task. Fourteen men—friends and relatives of those who labored at the mass—were believed buried under tons of brick and steel beams. Clear skies today and a complete organization of the work of rescue gave hope that some of the victims might be reached in time to prevent death.

Six were known to be dead, and a hospital was crowded with 60 others seriously injured. Two of the injured died in the hospital during the night. They were John Brunski, factory worker, and Viri Cornmesser, 14.

The other known dead were: Bernard Cornmesser, 14, brother of Virgil; Everett Cornmesser, 16, a cousin of the other two youths; Axel Fagerstrom, 50, factory employee, and Tony Martinkis.

Three hundred homes were destroyed in the stricken area and 1,200 persons were left homeless. Rockford citizens began subscribing today to a fund to care for the destitute.

The tornado swept a path 400 yards wide and 4 miles long through the industrial section of the city.

Damage was estimated at near $5,000,000. Three factories were wrecked and 350 men were left unemployed as a result.

The darkness of night hooded the city just before the wind struck. Workers in the Rockford Furniture plant told of hearing a distant rumble, which grew to a crashing roar. Then they heard surrounding frame structures falling in. Debris was hurled against the wall of the brick factory. Then the core of the storm struck.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—The edge of the storm which moved from the southeast across northern Illinois late yesterday, taking toll of six dead in Rockford, struck Chicago in the form of a severe electrical storm.

The entire city was hooded by darkness and swept by high winds, followed by torrential rains, which flooded streets in the northern section of the city and delayed traffic during the rush in the evening.

One woman was reported killed by a falling building.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 15.—The storm which swept Nebraska and Illinois Thursday and Friday, will sweep over Lake Erie late today or tonight, but with lessened intensity, the weather bureau said in storm warnings issued today. The storm will strike portions of Lake Ontario but serious damage is not to be anticipated, the bureau said.

ANDREW NELSON KEYNOTE ADDRESS AT BRAINERD

DULUTH MAN IS DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOV.
ERNOR

TO SPEAK HERE ON FRIDAY
EVENING, SEPTEMBER

St. Paul, Sept. 15.—(UP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith's only campaign speech in Minnesota will be delivered in the St. Paul auditorium on Thursday evening, Sept. 27, Joseph Wolf, democratic national committeeman, announced here today.

The announcement followed telegraphic advices from New York and put to an end contradictory reports that the democratic candidate would speak in Minneapolis.

At the same time it was announced that Andrew Nelson, Duluth, the democratic candidate for governor, will deliver his keynote address at Brainerd on Friday evening, Sept. 21. Mayor L. C. Hodgson, of St. Paul, will speak for the national ticket from the same rostrum.

Announcement of the time and place for the keynote speech of Gov. Theodore Christianson is not expected to be made before the middle of next week, it was said today at republican state headquarters.

The definite statement on the visit of Governor Smith started preparatory machinery in motion at once. Loud speakers have already been planned outside the auditorium and in nearby parks for the benefit of the overflow crowd.

Minnesota newspapermen will be afforded an opportunity to meet the democratic candidate in Minneapolis at 10:30 A. M. on the day of his arrival. The meeting probably will be held in the Nicollet Hotel.

The New York executive will then be a guest at a luncheon of Minneapolis supporters and may make a few brief remarks at that time.

C. W. SMELTZER, SOUTH ST. PAUL
MAYOR, DEFENDED BY THOS.

WAS INDICTED ON CHARGE OF
ACCEPTING BRIBES FROM BOOTLEGGERS

Hastings, Sept. 15.—(UP)—Final arguments in the bribery trial of C. W. Smeltzer, South St. Paul mayor, began in Dakota county district court here today and the case was expected to go into the hands of the jury before nightfall.

Mayor Smeltzer was indicted on a charge of accepting bribes from bootleggers following an investigation of vice conditions in the packing city.

Alderman Charles Zeman, who was indicted with the mayor, is expected to be called to trial some time this month.

Thomas W. McMeekin, defense counsel, introduced more than a score of witnesses, including city officials, prohibition agents and others in an attempt to prove that Mayor Smeltzer was a victim of his political enemies.

Chester Wilson, assistant attorney general and special prosecutor, attempted to prove that the city's chief executive had received bribes from owners of soft drink parlors for his efforts in securing for them foodstuffs licenses.

Present Course of Mad Tropical Hurricane Indicates It May Strike Florida Coast Soon

NOW HEADING TOWARD VICINITY TURKS ISLAND

SEEP IN FROM THE INTERIOR

Port Au Prince, Sept. 15.—(UP)—Present course of the tropical hurricane indicated it might strike the Florida coast some time today. The storm is striking toward the Turks Island which route would point it directly toward Florida.

New York, Sept. 15.—A message indicating serious loss of life in the Porto Rico hurricane, was received by the All America Cable Company today from its manager at Ponce.

The message said it was estimated that ten persons were killed at Ponce and that 700 were homeless or injured and in hospitals.

Ponce is but a small city of 28,000 population. It is 45 miles southwest of San Juan, the capital.

If destruction in all parts of the island were as great as at Ponce, casualties 50 times as great might be possible for all Porto Rico, as the population of the island is 1,300,000.

The manager's cable said that Ponce was directly in the path of the center of the storm.

Washington, Sept. 15.—President Coolidge may issue a national call for Porto Rico relief funds if Red Cross experts now on the way to the stricken island find that hurricane damage warrants such action, it was said today.

A corps of five Red Cross relief workers, headed by Director Henry M. Baker, left here at midnight for Charleston, S. C., to board a navy boat for Porto Rico immediately.

Weather bureau advices today showed that the hurricane had moved, by last midnight, to a point near Turk's Island, northwest of Porto Rico. Its path was 300 miles wide and a wind of 130 miles an hour was blowing from the northeast at latitude 28.50 north.

The bureau said the center of the storm would continue to move north-westward, at the rate of about 300 miles a day, passing somewhere near Nassau, Bahamas, tomorrow forenoon. Bureau officials declined to predict whether the storm would strike the Florida coast.

By ANGEL RAMOS
(United Press Special Correspondent)

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 15.—Forty-eight hours after the worst tropical hurricane in history struck this island, residents were still trying today to estimate the damage.

So widespread was the destruction that no one would venture an estimate of the property damage. From the interior of the island came meagre and intermittent reports, giving hints of disaster even greater than that in San Juan where thousands of laborers were working to establish and maintain communication with the outside world.

Hundreds of persons were being housed in public buildings today while families which had become separated during the confusion were being reunited.

La Perla, a suburb of San Juan, is in ruins, and it is impossible to estimate the number of dead and injured. Additional police are being enlisted rapidly to patrol the island and aid in the relief work.

Damage will run into millions.

LIVES UPON RUGGED CONSTITU-TION HE BUILT UP AS A YOUNG MAN

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Sept. 15.—Herbert Hoover is breezing through the strenuous physical exertions of a presidential campaign without doctors, diets or exercise.

Living upon the rugged constitution he built up as a young engineer in the wilds of Australia, China and the west, the republican presidential nominee is defying all health rules for candidates.

Hoover has always eaten faster than the average man. He eats anything and everything. He has laughed at friends who told him he had better watch his food. He has not consulted a physician since his nomination and this in the face of the old custom that every presidential candidate should carry a private physician with him wherever he goes.

And he appears to grow more robust with each day.

Meanwhile no further comment was forthcoming from headquarters concerning the charges of Henry C. Hansbrough, former North Dakota senator, who has written two letters to Hoover challenging him to stop the "whispering campaign."

George Akerson, secretary to the nominee, issued a statement late yesterday, accusing Hansbrough of making his letters public before Hoover had a chance to read them. Hoover does not answer such letters, Akerson said.

20 INDICTMENTS RETURNED BY ST. LOUIS GRAND JURY

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 15.—(UP)—Twenty indictments were returned by a special grand jury at Clayton today as a result of its investigation of crime conditions in St. Louis county.

UNITED BY MARRIAGE NEARLY 60 YEARS, UNITED IN DEATH

MYSTERY VEILS WHEREABOUTS OF LOST BOY

10 YEAR OLD BILLY RANIERI OF CHICAGO IN HANDS OF KIDNAPERS

ABDUCTORS DEMAND $60,000
RANSOM OR WILL KILL
LITTLE FELLOW

Chicago, Sept. 15.—(UP)—Mystery still veiled the whereabouts of 10-year-old Billy Ranieri and his kidnapers today—the day set by his abductors for the boy's death unless the $60,000 ransom demands are met.

Police were hampered in efforts to find the boy by conflicting rumors and reluctance of the father, A. Frank Ranieri, to supply further information which might aid in the search.

A resort said to be operated by Rocco de Grazio three miles from Elgin, Ill., was raided on information obtained by police last night. The boy had been held there but was removed three days ago, police said.

Angelo Pettiti, another suspect, was questioned today on the theory that he might be a "go between" for the Mafia organization believed to be responsible for the abduction.

The father continued to keep secret the purpose of hurried trips made from his home. Following the delivery of a special delivery letter yesterday Ranieri left his home in a taxicab, returning several hours later apparently in a cheerful mood.

Ranieri was believed by police to be withholding information in the fear that police action would lead to vengeance on the part of the Mafia ring. Police were not notified of the kidnapping until last Thursday although the boy had been missing over a week.

Salvatore Mastroianni, who was arrested with Renoldo Schiedo yesterday, was reported to have told police he had attempted to arrange with the kidnapers for the return of the boy after an interview with the father.

Police have declared their intention of pushing the investigation, despite the father's request that they leave the case to him.

Peek, Moline, Ill.; Theodore Brent, New Orleans, and Lachlan Macleay, St. Louis, were named an executive committee, during a meeting here late yesterday attended by river-town representatives between the Twin Cities and New Orleans.

The committee was authorized to spare no expense in efforts to acquaint congress with "the absolute need of a uniform channel from the head of navigation to the port," and was expected to bring about a meeting on or about Oct. 15, when the needs of river navigation will be pointed out to the war department in a formal hearing.

SENATOR CURTIS IN FIRST SPEECH, WESTERN CAMPAIGN

HIGHER TARIFF FOR AGRICUL-
TURAL PRODUCTS ADVOCATED

EXTENSION OF COOPERATIVE AS-SOCIATION OPERATIONS,
ETC.

By KENNETH G. CRAWFORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 15.—(UP)—A threefold program of farm relief was outlined here today by Senator Charles Curtis, republican vice-presidential nominee, in the first speech of his western campaign. His proposals were:

1. Higher tariff protection for agricultural products.
2. Extension of co-operative association operations.
3. A conference between Herbert Hoover and representatives of farm associations to decide what further measures are necessary.

"Tariff protection on farm products is an important means of relieving the present depression in agriculture and to place the farmer in a position of economic equality with our other industries," he said. "But in considering tariff rates as a means for meeting the problems of agriculture, the danger of undue reliance on the effectiveness of this method must be avoided."

"Part of the farmers' ills are the result of maladjustment of our distributing system—a lack of proper marketing facilities. Co-operative associations have done much to relieve this difficulty and if properly extended, will, in my judgment, bring still greater relief."

"Much has been done to ameliorate the farmers' situation but still more remains to be done. Mr. Hoover has agreed to call a conference of those representing the various farm organizations and of those interested with a view of reaching an agreement on legislation to relieve the situation and he will keep his promise."

"The encouragement of agriculture always has been a republican doctrine," he said. "It is a necessary part of our philosophy of government."

Hudson, Ont., Sept. 15.—(UP)—Fifty isolated miners in the Red Lake country who faced possible death from starvation after a devastating forest fire swept through their camp were known to be safe today through the daring and skill of an unnamed aviator.

The men, 110 miles from a railroad, were deprived of food and shelter early this week when fire completely destroyed their cooking and sleeping buildings.

A fire patrol later sighted the men and sensing their plight brought them food and clothing from Hudson and Winnipeg. The men were said today to be out of danger.

TWIN CITIES AND NEW OR-LEANS AT MEETING

NAME AN EXECUTIVE COMMIT-TEE TO ACQUAINT CONGRESS
WITH CONDITIONS

Minneapolis, Sept. 15.—(UP)—Five influential barge line officials today began an organized effort to secure a nine-foot channel for the upper Mississippi river.

A. O. Wiprud, Minneapolis; Col. George C. Lambert, St. Paul; B. F. Peek, Moline, Ill.; Theodore Brent, New Orleans, and Lachlan Macleay, St. Louis, were named an executive committee, during a meeting here late yesterday attended by river-town representatives between the Twin Cities and New Orleans.

The committee was authorized to spare no expense in efforts to acquaint congress with "the absolute need of a uniform channel from the head of navigation to the port," and was expected to bring about a meeting on or about Oct. 15, when the needs of river navigation will be pointed out to the war department in a formal hearing.

SENATOR CURTIS IN FIRST SPEECH, WESTERN CAMPAIGN

HIGHER TARIFF FOR AGRICUL-
TURAL PRODUCTS ADVOCATED

EXTENSION OF COOPERATIVE AS-SOCIATION OPERATIONS,
ETC.

By KENNETH G. CRAWFORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 15.—(UP)—A threefold program of farm relief was outlined here today by Senator Charles Curtis, republican vice-presidential nominee, in the first speech of his western campaign. His proposals were:

1. Higher tariff protection for agricultural products.
2. Extension of co-operative association operations.
3. A conference between Herbert Hoover and representatives of farm associations to decide what further measures are necessary.

"Tariff protection on farm products is an important means of relieving the present depression in agriculture and to place the farmer in a position of economic equality with our other industries," he said.

"But in considering tariff rates as a means for meeting the problems of agriculture, the danger of undue reliance on the effectiveness of this method must be avoided.

"Part of the farmers' ills are the result of maladjustment of our distributing system—a lack of proper marketing facilities. Co-operative associations have done much to relieve this difficulty and if properly extended, will, in my judgment, bring still greater relief.

"Much has been done to ameliorate the farmers' situation but still more remains to be done. Mr. Hoover has agreed to call a conference of those representing the various farm organizations and of those interested with a view of reaching an agreement on legislation to relieve the situation and he will keep his promise."

"The encouragement of agriculture always has been a republican doctrine," he said. "It is a necessary part of our philosophy of government."

50 ISOLATED MINERS FACE STARVATION DEATH

Hudson, Ont., Sept. 15.—(UP)—Fifty isolated miners in the Red Lake country who faced possible death from starvation after a devastating forest fire swept through their camp were known to be safe today through the daring and skill of an unnamed aviator.

The men, 110 miles from a railroad, were deprived of food and shelter early this week when fire completely destroyed their cooking and sleeping buildings.

A fire patrol sighted the men and sensing their plight brought them food and clothing from Hudson and Winnipeg. The men were said today to be out of danger.

Vicious Poultry Pests
Difficult to Eradicate
Chicken mites are small grayish red mites about the size of a pinhead when filled with blood. They hide away during the day in cracks and crevices throughout the hen house, migrating to the roosting birds at night to suck blood.
Stick-tight fleas are small flat-sided, hard-bodied creatures that appear as dark areas about the eyes, comb and wattles. Poultry ticks or blue-bugs are closely related to mites but are always larger, easily seen and have a thick, leathery skin. They are flat, egg-shaped and dark brown in color. Their habits are essentially the same as those of the chicken mite.

Vicious Poultry Pests
Difficult to Eradicate

Chicken mites are small grayish red mites about the size of a pinhead when filled with blood. They hide away during the day in cracks and crevices throughout the hen house, migrating to the roosting birds at night to suck blood.

Stick-tight fleas are small flat-sided, hard-bodied creatures that appear as dark areas about the eyes, comb and wattles. Fowl-ticks or blue-bugs are closely related to mites but are always larger, easily seen and have a thick, leathery skin. They are flat, egg-shaped and dark brown in color. Their habits are essentially the same as those of the chicken mite.

THE TARIFF ISSUE

THE stand of the two major parties on the tariff is aptly described by Leslie M. Shaw in the following article:

Both parties in their platforms, and both candidates in their speeches of acceptance, stand pledged to prompt tariff revision.

The Republican platform of this year says "We realize there are certain industries which cannot successfully compete with foreign producers * * * and we pledge the next Republican Congress to an examination and, where necessary, a revision of these schedules to the end that American labor in these industries may again command the home market."

In his speech of acceptance, the Republican candidate promised to use his office and influence to give the country farmer the full benefit of "our historic tariff policy."

This reference of "our historic tariff policy" makes necessary a quotation from the Republican platform of 1908, which has never been rescinded or qualified. This platform lays down the true rule to be "The difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit for American industry, the purpose being to preserve that security against foreign competition to which the American farmer, manufacturer, and other producers are entitled."

So much for the Republican position. Prior to 1924 the Democratic party had traditionally stood for "tariff for revenue only." Four years ago they qualified this by declaring in favor of tariff for revenue and effective competition. I quote from their platform of that year: "A tax on commodities entering the custom houses that will promote effective competition, protect against monopoly and produce a reasonable revenue."

Their platform of this year repeats the foregoing with but two unimportant verbal changes, and adds: "The actual difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, with adequate safeguard for the wage of American labor, must be the extreme measure for every tariff rate."

Manifestly the phrase "adequate safeguards for the wage of American labor" is mere surplusage, for the difference in wage scales is fully covered in the relative cost of production.

In his speech of acceptance, the Democratic candidate says, "I shall ask Congress to carry out the tariff declaration of our platform."

The tariff issue stands, therefore, clear cut and unequivocal, and the parties on that question are, as always, diametrically opposed.

The Republican party promises, and its candidate approves duties in every instance at least equal to the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, plus a reasonable profit to American producers, while the Democratic platform says, and its candidate approves, that tariff rates in no instance shall exceed the actual difference in the cost of production at home and abroad.

The Republican platform promises security against disastrous foreign competition, while the Democratic party stands pledged to promote effective competition.

The Republican party promises every American producer and laborer a workable advantage over all foreigners in all American markets, while the Democratic party gives notice that no American producer or laborer shall have any advantage over any foreigner in any American market. "The actual difference in the cost of production at home and abroad must be the extreme limit of every tariff rate" is the language of the platform, and the Democratic candidate says he will ask Congress to carry it out.

HARD TIMES? MAYBE

TWENTY-TWO thousand people attending the Ringling Brothers circus at Marshall, Saturday. Besides the $40,000 spent by them to gain admission to the "big top," the side-shows, etc., another $40,000 was spent for gasoline, food, etc.

This vast sum of money would support the public schools and all of Marshall's churches for a year, says the Slayton Herald. It would support every school in Murray county for a like period.

Getting sufficient money to keep their church on the right side of the ledger is a problem shared by every minister.

Levying a few mills for education advantages never fails to bring criticism to county boards and school boards.

Truly we are a funny lot.

The circus has come and gone. The memories of those who attended will soon fade away and with it this great sum of money never to return to this section of the state.

But the churches and schools we will have with us always, as well as the benefits resulting from them—a better and nobler citizenry.

And as always has been the case, we shall continue to give grudgingly to our churches. We shall ever condemn the high taxes. We will never fail to preach hard times, and we'll always be on the search for new thrills, new ways and means of spending our hard earned money.

Yea, verily, we are a funny and most inconsistent lot.

HIGHWAY ADVERTISING

THE state law against advertising signs on the highways applies to political posters and not only to commercial advertising, a State Highway bulletin reminds us. No signs or posters advertising anybody or anything may be put up on the right-of-way of any state or local highway. The State highway department will take down any signs erected on the state highways, and many counties are enforcing the law strictly on the county highways.

The state traffic act also prohibits placing any signs or stickers on the windshield, rear window or front side windows of any automobile. This was enacted because the old practice of putting candidates' pictures and other advertising matter in the car windows obscured the vision and caused accidents.

CHANNEL swimming is in vogue in England, although the rest of the world fails to get excited about it. Helmi, the giant Egyptian, at length succeeded in swimming the channel. However, he is in the same class as the French-Canadian who went over Niagara Falls in a rubber ball. Both are unable to commercialize their feats and make any money out of them.

ALL the country perks up when a gleam of sunshine pierces our barrier of Oregon and Washington mist. The country has certainly had a lot of rain the past two months and September appears anxious to range with the moist months.

LAKETON, Indiana, citizens, anxious to cut a channel through their Mud Lake, did it so effectively that the whole lake drained and was reduced to actual mud.

HOOVER HOUSE IS A HOMELIKE HOME

Palo Alto Neighbors Praise Kindly Hospitality of Their Most Famous Residents.

MRS. HOOVER VERY POPULAR

She Planned Her California House Herself and Superintended the Building of It on Stanford University Campus.

By Ruth Comfort Mitchell

PALO ALTO.—The town of Palo Alto and the campus of Stanford University fairly pulse and glow with the presence of the Hoovers. It isn't only the visible manifestation of flags and banners and flowers and printed placards in the shop windows, but something which is at once less tangible and yet more real and permanent—the genuine warmth of pride and loyalty which radiates from faces and voices everywhere.

The Hoovers are and always have been an integral part of the picture here, and it is interesting and illuminating to see them through the eyes of college mates, old friends, neighbors, and newcomers, proud to share their world eminence.

Men and women of their own generation remember their university days and sketch two fine and vital young people who showed in youth the keenness, the energy, and devotion and balance which have made them what they are today.

It is a community rich in members of the "I-Knew-'Em-When-Club." People like to paint them as they have known them through the years—college students, the young married couple taking the great out-trail of the mining engineer, forging steadily and solidly ahead by reason of grit and endurance and cleverness, coming into professional and material success and taking it simply and sensibly, coming back to build a typical California home on a California hill overlooking the campus where they worked and played and found each other in a community of interests and character.

The Hoover house is reached by a winding, mounting road from the campus, and is built on a hill, with the mountains piling up behind and beyond it, and the red tiled roofs of Stanford just below.

It is a low, rambling edifice of the pueblo type and fits so perfectly into its setting that it seems as component part of the landscape as the trees and the rolling ridge itself.

Neighborly House

The Hoover house is symbolic of the Hoovers themselves in the way in which it merges into its background. There is nothing aloof about it; it is tucked in easily between its neighbors. Hoover trees shade neighbors' lawns and neighbors' roses spill over Hoover fences. There is a gate cut into the wall so that the neighbors can come through, without going round to the front, to share the swimming pool. Neighbors come and go, now, in these dramatic days, as they always did, slipping in with baskets of fruit and armfuls of flowers; there is no tension, no sense of strain or impending strain in the atmosphere.

Mrs. Hoover feels strongly that the California out-of-doors is so brilliantly, often harshly bright, that the insides of houses should be cool and restful, and she has attained that effect in her own. In all decoration she is fonder of the beauty of line, or design, rather than color. One steps into a rather small reception hall, round in shape, with stairs leading down from it to sleeping rooms, and the living room and the open roof beyond beckoning from it. Everything is low-toned and restful to the eye which has just come in from emerald lawns and turquoise sky—brown on floor and wall and window, with an Indian basket filled with heavy hued zinnias for the only robust color note.

The guest rooms are below, and they, too, are in the same color scheme. They are delightfully inviting, deliciously comfortable, plain, homey, simple.

Comfortable and Livable

There are generous beds and deep chairs really made to sit in. There is not a stiff, badly angled chair in the Hoover house! There are more of the cheerful zinnias in pottery bowls, and books on the table which are meant to be read. And there are no delicate, unprogrammed, too-exquisite guest towels—the sort which make a well meaning visitor feel she should wipe her hands on her handkerchief—merely a quantity of plain, soft, beautifully laundered linen towels which are manifestly made to be used.

That is the keynote of the whole place. Everything is genuine, comfortable, livable.

Everyone knows, nowadays, that Mrs. Hoover planned the house herself and superintended the building of it, so that it is a definite expression of her ideals of home making, and that she said she had walls only where it was absolutely necessary to keep books and papers and clothing in, or the amiable California weather out, and for the rest, roofs, in true pueblo fashion, flat roofs on different levels, where they read and rest and meet their friends, day dream or doze or dine! For practically all the year they use the roofs for sitting rooms. There are cushions on the stone copings and hammocks and swings and reed and wicker chairs and everything is comfortable and well used, and just a little worn shabby here and there—the sort of things which are reluctantly discarded because they are so deeply entrenched in the life of the household.

No Ultra Modern Ideas

Mrs. Hoover manages the very rare and satisfying effect of an absolutely unstudied ensemble. Her things seem to belong together by right of convenience and fitness and harmony. It is cheerfully evident that no ultra modern decorator has been given a free hand to experiment with bizarre combinations: Mrs. Hoover's house is as clearly her own, and an echo of her own personality, as her clothes are.

There is just one picture in the large, finely proportioned indoor living room, a painting by the California artist, Francis McComas, of an ancient Indian pueblo dwelling, the motif for the whole thing.

Mr. Hoover, standing before it with friends one day, said, "Well, give us a couple of hundred years and this house will look as mellow and interesting as that does!"

In the dining room there is a single picture, likewise a California desert scene with a lot of glamour and magic in it, by A. L. Groll. Mrs. Hoover feels that the walls of a California country house do not need much in the way of decoration when the windows offer so much!

The whole east end of the dining room is a big rounded window, and there the Hoovers have breakfast, looking out on the hearty and high colored garden, over the red roofs of Stanford, down to the bay, and across the Santa Clara Valley to the Coast Range Mountains with the Lick Observatory on Mt. Hamilton shining sharply in the sun.

Blue for Rugs and Gowns

Mrs. Hoover has a great fondness for blue, a cool clear blue which, in a gown, picks up the color of her eyes, and in her own room there is a Chinese rug which strongly features it.

Mr. Hoover's study with French doors and windows reaching down to the floor opens out on it. All day long, when the Hoovers are at home, as they were in early August, a line of men passes in and out of his room, waiting out in the sunny driveway or strolling in the garden. At four o'clock old friends and neighbors and college mates come in to see Mrs. Hoover and for a couple of hours there is a quiet, comfortable visit, with California fruit punch and home made cookies, and good talk.

Mrs. Hoover, in the quiet combinations of gray and black or black with white which she has worn since her father's death, bare headed, moves from group to group with a quiet friendliness which is delightful. She has a very alert social consciousness, the more pleasing because it functions silently and unobtrusively. In the midst of an anecdote of Australia—and Mrs. Hoover tells a story excellently well—she is aware of a small, lonesome figure in a corner, and presently she gathers up one or two of the chattier callers and moves casually toward the quiet one and wonders if she would mind taking the friends up to the top roof for the wider view.

Frequently, during this period, they dine on the roof, in the full glory of the sunset.

Never in a Hurry

The most amazing thing is the feeling of leisure which Mrs. Hoover manages to radiate, in spite of all that is before her and upon her. There is no sense of crowding hurry; she is that rare and blessed person, a woman who has learned to do the next thing next—who doesn't wrestle with tomorrow's problems today. She has kept the comfortable habit of her girlhood of being able to relax instantly. Between two important functions she can drop on the couch and sleep ten minutes like a well regulated baby, and that perfect balance and poise is reflected in her appearance and personality.

Mrs. Hoover's clothes are Mrs. Hoover's clothes. Just as her house is free from the standardizing of the professional decorator, so her gowns and wraps are clearly of her own choosing, stamped by her very definite individuality. No one "dresses Mrs. Hoover."

Some time during the afternoon hours of visiting Mr. Hoover comes out of his study and takes fifteen or twenty minutes of air and freedom, and chats with the callers. He looks always in the pink of condition, well, buoyant, vigorous. Mrs. Hoover sees to it that the most modest and inconspicuous visitors meet him first. He, too, gives the sense of unhurried calm, although relentless routine calls him back to the waiting work-

Better, better---who has something better?

To stand still is to stagnate. We Americans are not content with what we have; we are always looking for something better. We want better and more wholesome foods. We want newer and better ways of doing things—labor-saving devices, short-cuts. We want better educational facilities, better and more comfortable homes, better working conditions. Betterment is progress. That's why every today is better than every yesterday.

Advertising is a medium of progress. Through advertisements we learn of the newest time and labor-saving machines for home and factory. Advertisements keep us posted on progress in sciences; of the new or improved foods, clothes and the every-day necessities of life.

You have but to look through the advertisements in the newspapers or magazines to find the article you need or want, advertised.

Advertising supplies new ideas, new materials, new methods to a work-a-day world. It helps make today better than yesterday.

The reading of advertisements is a good habit
It contributes to more intelligent living

No Ultra Modern Ideas

Mrs. Hoover manages the very rare and satisfying effect of an absolutely unstudied ensemble. Her things seem to belong together by right of convenience and fitness and harmony. It is cheerfully evident that no ultra modern decorator has been given a free hand to experiment with bizarre combinations: Mrs. Hoover's house is as clearly her own, and an echo of her own personality, as her clothes are.

There is just one picture in the large, finely proportioned indoor living room, a painting by the California artist, Francis McComas, of an ancient Indian pueblo dwelling, the motif for the whole thing.

Mr. Hoover, standing before it with friends one day, said, "Well, give us a couple of hundred years and this house will look as mellow and interesting as that does!"

In the dining room there is a single picture, likewise a California desert scene with a lot of glamour and magic in it, by A. L. Groff. Mrs. Hoover feels that the walls of a California country house do not need much in the way of decoration when the windows offer so much!

The whole east end of the dining room is a big rounded window, and there the Hoovers have breakfast, looking out on the hearty and high colored garden, over the red roofs of Stanford, down to the bay, and across the Santa Clara Valley to the Coast Range Mountains with the Lick Observatory on Mt. Hamilton shining sharply in the sun.

Blue for Rugs and Gowns

Mrs. Hoover has a great fondness for blue, a cool clear blue which, in a gown, picks up the color of her eyes, and in her own room there is a Chinese rug which strongly features it.

Mr. Hoover's study with French doors and windows reaching down to the floor opens out on it. All day long, when the Hoovers are at home, as they were in early August, a line of men passes in and out of his room, waiting out in the sunny driveway or strolling in the garden. At four o'clock old friends and neighbors and college mates come in to see Mrs. Hoover and for a couple of hours there is a quiet, comfortable visit, with California fruit punch and home made cookies, and good talk.

Mrs. Hoover, in the quiet combinations of gray and black or black with white which she has worn since her father's death, bare headed, moves from group to group with a quiet friendliness which is delightful. She has a very alert social consciousness, the more pleasing because it functions silently and unobtrusively. In the midst of an anecdote of Australia—and Mrs. Hoover tells a story excellently well—she is aware of a small, lonesome figure in a corner, and presently she gathers up one or two of the chattier callers and moves casually toward the quiet one and wonders if she would mind taking the friends up to the top roof for the wider view.

Frequently, during this period, they dine on the roof, in the full glory of the sunset.

Never in a Hurry

The most amazing thing is the feeling of leisure which Mrs. Hoover manages to radiate, in spite of all that is before her and upon her. There is no sense of crowding hurry; she is that rare and blessed person, a woman who has learned to do the next thing next—who doesn't wrestle with tomorrow's problems today. She has kept the comfortable habit of her girlhood of being able to relax instantly. Between two important functions she can drop on the couch and sleep ten minutes like a well regulated baby, and that perfect balance and poise is reflected in her appearance and personality.

Mrs. Hoover's clothes are Mrs. Hoover's clothes. Just as her house is free from the standardizing of the professional decorator, so her gowns and wraps are clearly of her own choosing, stamped by her very definite individuality. No one "dresses Mrs. Hoover."

Some time during the afternoon hours of visiting Mr. Hoover comes out of his study and takes fifteen or twenty minutes of air and freedom, and chats with the callers. He looks always in the pink of condition, well, buoyant, vigorous. Mrs. Hoover sees to it that the most modest and inconspicuous visitors meet him first. He, too, gives the sense of unharried calm, although relentless routine calls him back to the waiting work

When Ranieri told kidnappers over the phone that he could not raise the money, they said, "Unless we get the money by Saturday, you will never see your boy alive again."

Better, better---who has something better?

To stand still is to stagnate. We Americans are not content with what we have; we are always looking for something better. We want better and more wholesome foods. We want newer and better ways of doing things—labor-saving devices, short-cuts. We want better educational facilities, better and more comfortable homes, better working conditions. Betterment is progress. That's why every today is better than every yesterday.

Advertising is a medium of progress. Through advertisements we learn of the newest time and labor-saving machines for home and factory. Advertisements keep us posted on progress in sciences; of the new or improved foods, clothes and the every-day necessities of life.

You have but to look through the advertisements in the newspapers or magazines to find the article you need or want, advertised.

Advertising supplies new ideas, new materials, new methods to a work-a-day world. It helps make today better than yesterday.

The reading of advertisements is a good habit
It contributes to more intelligent living

St. Paul, Sept. 15.—(U.P.)—Pity the poor duck.

The vanguard of 130,000 hunters pulled on their rubber boots today, oiled their shotguns and were away to the passes and marshes for the opening of hunting season at 5:22 a. m. tomorrow.

George W. McCullough, state game and fish commissioner, declared today that the present season would perhaps be the most successful from the standpoint of game, in years.

A wet, rainy, summer filled ponds and lakes and streams, making breeding conditions excellent and reports from farmers state that ducks are plentiful.

McCullough said 130,000 hunting licenses are expected to be issued before the close of the season compared to 117,000 last year.

GAME LICENSES IN COUNTY MOUNT

Henry Krause, deputy county auditor in charge of the issuance of game licenses at the court house estimated this morning that more than 1,000 licenses will have been taken out by duck hunters before closing time today.

Yesterday 170 licenses were issued and from the opening hour hunters stood in line today to secure their licenses before the season opens tomorrow.

Previously this week more than 500 licenses had been issued.

FIRST INTERNATIONAL FINAL OF AMERICAN CHAMPION- SHIP PLAY

IF PERKINS WINS THEN THE CROWN WILL BE CARRIED OVERSEAS

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15.—Blazing a scoring trail of pars and birdies, Bobby Jones, America's premier amateur, beat England's best in T. Phillip Perkins here today to win for the fourth time the American Amateur Golf Championship. The margin was ten up and 9 to play.

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)
Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15.—Coming home with a string of pars and birdies, which put him under par for the inside nine, Bobby Jones, American amateur champion, was six up on T. Phillip Perkins, British titleholder, in the morning round of their 36-hole match for the National Amateur Golf Championship here today.

The cards:
Morning round:
Jones out ..... 644 453 434-37
In ..... 444 454 444-35-72
Perkins out ..... 444 665 435-41
In ..... 544 654 434-39-80

The Atlantan, for all his great golf, could not shake off Perkins as he did his opponents in the earlier rounds, but Bobby was in possession of a commanding advantage when they strolled, arm in arm, up to the clubhouse for lunch.

The Lancastershire golfer failed to live up to the promise of some of his previous matches at Braeburn. It may have been that the huge gallery which shifted and charged up and down hill after the contestants, worried Perkins. He was woefully inaccurate at times when accuracy was at a premium, and Jones, once he got started, quickly left the young British champion far behind.

Perkins won but one hole in the first and one in the second. Towards the finish of the round, however, "Tim" was fighting gamely and holding Bobby on even terms.

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15.—A Lancastershire lad whose spectacles give him an expression of owlish good humor but whose eye for the straight path to the pin is as keen as any in golf, faced the monarch of the American links today in the first international final the American Amateur Championship has known in 17 years.

T. Phillip Perkins, 23-year-old amateur champion of Great Britain, and Bobby Jones, American titleholder, teed off at Braeburn to determine whether the Atlantan was to win his fourth title in five years or whether the crown was to be carried overseas to the land where golfing crowns originated.

The American champion is a 2 to 1 favorite, but there was little tendency to underrate the ability of the young cotton broker whose progress through the tournament at Braeburn has been quietly impressive.

The match was at 36 holes, an undoubted advantage for Jones, who is playing these days as though he were unbeatable at the distance. The last time they met, Bobby beat the British champion, 13 up and 12 to play, the worst beating, in fact, that ever was administered in an international match for the Walker cup.

Bobby himself insisted that the result of that match at Wheaton last month should be thrown out in calculating the chances of the competitor in today's final.

"I got the breaks at the start of that match," admitted Jones.

The British champion is the first from overseas to reach the finals of an American Amateur Championship since 1911, when Harold Hilton won the title in a 37-hole match with Fred Herreshoff at Apawamis.

N. Y. GIANTS IN 8 STRAIGHT WINS OVER BOSTON

New York, Sept. 15.—(U.P.)—Eight straight wins over the Boston Braves in four days have placed the New York Giants within one game of the St. Louis Cardinals in the National league pennant race. A game and a half behind the Giants are the Chicago Cubs, who were idle yesterday.

Today the Giants play the Robins in Brooklyn. Dazzy Vance is due to go to the mound for the Robins, and Vance has always been a problem for the New York team. Genewich is likely to pitch for New York.

In Philadelphia, the St. Louis Cardinals have a chance to increase their lead as a double-header is scheduled with the Phillies. The Chicago Cubs also have a double-header scheduled with the Boston Braves, which is the fifth straight double-header for the Braves.

The American league pennant contenders swing into action again this afternoon. The Yankees, with a game and a half lead, face the St. Louis Browns in St. Louis. Philadelphia and Cleveland meet in the latter city as the last western invasion gets underway.

By QUIN HALL.
WHEN a baseball-wise fellow like Charley Comiskey, of the Chicago White Sox, invests something like $223,000 in a couple of ball players they must have something besides a moniker and a regular place in the dining room.

While this small-sized fortune—that is, small sized in accordance with Rockefellerian and Fordian standards—wasn't all tossed on the boards in cold cash—players counting for some of the transaction—it still remains a pretty sizable lay-out.
And the two players who figure in the deal—Willie Kamm and Bill Cisell—seem to be justifying the good judgment of Comiskey, the Old Roman of the baseball racket.
Kamm, the Coast star who nicked the White Sox bankroll for something like $100,000 before, has been wearing the colorful hose for quite a time and holding down the hot corner for the Chicago club in good style. This year he is socking the apple with more gusto than usual and this improvement in his hitting is due to the fact that prior to this season he has been up at the plate choking his bat. This year he is taking a toe-hold and swinging at the ball with all his weight and it will be surprising if he doesn't finish the season with a .300 mark where last year he only slashed the pitchers for .270—and a difference of thirty points is something to write home about.

Cisell, whose first name is Chalmer but who prefers to be called plain Bill, is the shortstop who was obtained from the Portland Club last Fall for a reported $123,000 in cash and players.

Bill used to be a United States cavalryman, but after riding around on a horse for four years without getting any place he decided to buy his way out of the service for $85 and give up the horse for the ball field. In 1926 Bill joined the Des Moines club. He always had played the infield, but the Des Moines club was well supplied with infielders, so Cisell was used as utility man. The break came when Fred Knothe, the regular shortstop, was injured. Bill plugged the hole, and then Tom Turner, owner of the Portland club, and a fellow who does his own scouting, came down to look at Knothe, and finding him out, remained to watch Cisell. Eventually he bought the youngster who was filling in for the regular. The price was $13,000, and within a year Comiskey repaid Turner for his investment nearly ten times over. That's a sizable leap, and few, if any, cases in baseball's frenzied finance compare with it.

His playing so far this year has been especially brilliant in view of the fact that not only is he a newcomer to the Big Top, but in addition lacks the guiding hand and hand of a star second baseman alongside him. Barrett is too busy watching his own job to give Cisell much help and the costly shortstop might be more of a dazzling light if he was paired with a really seasoned keystone sacker.
But he has come along in great style. He's fast, covers a lot of territory and hits the ball hard. And he doesn't get rattled in the pinches, which is rather unusual for a fellow who is so new to the big push. One reason for this is that Cisell sees nothing odd in the fact that he cost the White Sox a big chunk of coin and instead of baseball playing in a single game he is satisfied to dole it out on the installment plan.
So the boys who ought to know are saying the White Sox used good judgment in acquiring Kamm and Cisell. If they had flopped—but that would be an entirely different story—and after all they haven't and the pair may yet help hoist a league pennant in Chicago.
Not this year, but possibly next year or the year after.

FIRST INTERNATIONAL FINAL OF AMERICAN CHAMPION- SHIP PLAY

IF PERKINS WINS THEN THE CROWN WILL BE CARRIED OVERSEAS

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15.—Blazing a scoring trail of pars and birdies, Bobby Jones, America's premier amateur, beat England's best in T. Phillip Perkins here today to win for the fourth time the American Amateur Golf Championship. The margin was ten up and 9 to play.

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15.—Coming home with a string of pars and birdies, which put him under par for the inside nine, Bobby Jones, American amateur champion, was six up on T. Phillip Perkins, British titleholder, in the morning round of their 36-hole match for the National Amateur Golf Championship here today.

The cards:
Morning round:
Jones out ..... 644 453 434—37
In ..... 444 454 444—35—72
Perkins out ..... 444 665 435—41
In ..... 544 654 434—39—80

The Atlantian, for all his great golf, could not shake off Perkins as he did his opponents in the earlier rounds, but Bobby was in possession of a commanding advantage when they strolled, arm in arm, up to the clubhouse for lunch.

The Lancastershire golfer failed to live up to the promise of some of his previous matches at Braeburn. It may have been that the huge gallery which shifted and charged up and down hill after the contestants, worried Perkins. He was woefully inaccurate at times when accuracy was at a premium, and Jones, once he got started, quickly left the young British champion far behind.

Perkins won but one hole in the first and one in the second. Towards the finish of the round, however, "Tim" was fighting gamely and holding Bobby on even terms.

Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., Sept. 15.—A Lancastershire lad whose spectacles give him an expression of owlish good humor but whose eye for the straight path to the pin is as keen as any in golf, faced the monarch of the American links today in the first international final the American Amateur Championship has known in 17 years.

T. Phillip Perkins, 23-year-old amateur champion of Great Britain, and Bobby Jones, American titleholder, teed off at Braeburn to determine whether the Atlantian was to win his fourth title in five years or whether the crown was to be carried overseas to the land where golfing crowns originated.

The American champion is a 2 to 1 favorite, but there was little tendency to underrate the ability of the young cotton broker whose progress through the tournament at Braeburn has been quietly impressive.

The match was at 36 holes, an undoubted advantage for Jones, who is playing these days as though he were unbeatable at the distance. The last time they met, Bobby beat the British champion, 13 up and 12 to play, the worst beating, in fact, that ever was administered in an international match for the Walker cup.

Bobby himself insisted that the result of that match at Wheaton last month should be thrown out in calculating the chances of the competitor's in today's finals.

"I got the breaks at the start of that match," admitted Jones.

The British champion is the first from overseas to reach the finals of an American Amateur Championship since 1911, when Harold Hilton won the title in a 37-hole match with Fred Herreshoff at Apawamis.

N. Y. GIANTS IN 8 STRAIGHT WINS OVER BOSTON

New York, Sept. 15.—(U.P.)—Eight straight wins over the Boston Braves in four days have placed the New York Giants within one game of the St. Louis Cardinals in the National league pennant race. A game and a half behind the Giants are the Chicago Cubs, who were idle yesterday.

Today the Giants play the Robins in Brooklyn. Dazzy Vance is due to go to the mound for the Robins, and Vance has always been a problem for the New York team. Genewich is likely to pitch for New York.

In Philadelphia, the St. Louis Cardinals have a chance to increase their lead as a double-header is scheduled with the Phillies. The Chicago Cubs also have a double-header scheduled with the Boston Braves, which is the fifth straight double-header for the Braves.

The American league pennant contenders swing into action again this afternoon. The Yankees, with a game and a half lead, face the St. Louis Browns in St. Louis. Philadelphia and Cleveland meet in the latter city as the last western invasion gets underway.

By QUIN HALL.
WHEN a baseball-wise fellow like Charley Comiskey, of the Chicago White Sox, invests something like $223,000 in a couple of ball players they must have something besides a moniker and a regular place in the dining room.

While this small-sized fortune—that is, small sized in accordance with Rockefellerian and Fordian standards—wasn't all tossed on the boards in cold cash—players counting for some of the transaction—it still remains a pretty sizable lay-out.

And the two players who figure in the deal—Willie Kamm and Bill Cissell—seem to be justifying the good judgment of Comiskey, the Old Roman of the baseball racket. Kamm, the Coast star who nicked the White Sox bankroll for something like 100,000 berries, has been wearing the colorless hose for quite a time and holding down the hot corner for the Chicago club in good style. This year he is socking the apple with more gusto than usual and this improvement in his hitting is due to the fact that prior to this season he has been up at the plate choking his bat. This year he is taking a toehold and swinging at the ball with all his weight and it will be surprising if he doesn't finish the season with a .300 mark where last year he only slashed the pitchers for .270—and a difference of thirty points is something to write home about.

Cissell, whose first name is Chalmers but who prefers to be called plain Bill, is the shortstop who was obtained from the Portland Club last fall for a reported $123,000 in cash and players.

Bill used to be a United States cavalryman, but after riding around on a horse for four years without getting any place he decided to buy his way out of the service for $85 and give up the horse for the ball field. In 1920 Bill joined the Des Moines club. He always had played the infield, but the Des Moines club was well supplied with infielders, so Cissell was used as utility man. The break came when Fred Knothe, the regular shortstop, was injured. Bill plugged the hole, and then Tom Turner, owner of the Portland club, and a fellow who does his own scouting, came down to look at Knothe, and finding him out, remained to watch Cissell. Eventually he bought the youngster who was filling in for the regular. The price was $13,000, and within a year Comiskey repaid Turner for his investment nearly ten times over. That's a sizable leap, and few, if any, cases in baseball's frenzied finance compare with it.

His playing so far this year has been especially brilliant in view of the fact that not only is he a newcomer to the Big Top, but in addition lacks the guiding hand and hand of a star second baseman alongside him. Barrett is too busy watching his own job to give Cissell much help and the costly shortstop might be more of a dazzling light if he was paired with a really seasoned keystone sacker.

But he has come along in great style. He's fast, covers a lot of territory and hits the ball hard. And he doesn't get rattled in the pinches, which is rather unusual for a fellow who is so new to the big push. One reason for this is that Cissell sees nothing old in the fact that he cost the White Sox a big chunk of coin and instead of trying to deliver $123,000 worth of baseball playing in a single game he is satisfied to dole it out on the installment plan.

So the boys who ought to know are saying the White Sox used good judgment in acquiring Kamm and Cissell. If they had flopped—but that would be an entirely different story—and after all they haven't and the pair may yet help hoist a league pennant in Chicago.

Not this year, but possibly next year or the year after.

B. H. S. GRID SQUAD FACE HANDICAPS

WET CONDITION OF THE FIELD FORCES THEM TO PRACTICE ON PAPER MILL GROUNDS

Weather, lack of a permanent field to practice on, and the loss of a player who had won for himself the center position, are handicaps which the Brainerd high school football squad has faced and must overcome before their opening clash of the season next Saturday here with Milaca.

Rain and general unfavorable conditions have prevented the squad from continuing their daily scrimmages during the past week but what was lost in outside practice was made up by chalk talks by Coach Warren Kasch.

The flooded condition of the municipal field has made it impossible to play on it during the past week. Even today the ground was partly covered with water and to get in scrimmage, Coach Kasch took his men out to the paper mill grounds for a good workout this morning.

Ernest Fox, who had practically cinched the center position, was lost to the team this week when it became known that he had been ruled ineligible on account of credit marks during the past semester.

A large list of candidates are still trying out for positions still vacant on the team.

BRAINERD'S OLDEST STORY OF TODAY

Ross Campbell, ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Campbell has devised a new method of catching bullheads that "skins" anything already on the market in the way of lures.

Knowing that the bullhead is naturally one of the most curious of lake denizens, young Ross used this as a means to entrap two good sized bullheads in North Long Lake this week.

He slowly sank an inflated inner automobile tube into the water, cut a hole in the tube, permitted the water to enter the tube and then awaited developments. Soon after when he regained the tube from the lake he found two bullheads on the inside. Their curiosity to determine the contents of the object had spelled their doom.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORY OF TODAY

Ross Campbell, ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Campbell has devised a new method of catching bullheads that "skins" anything already on the market in the way of lures.

Knowing that the bullhead is naturally one of the most curious of lake denizens, young Ross used this as a means to entrap two good sized bullheads in North Long Lake this week.

He slowly sank an inflated inner automobile tube into the water, cut a hole in the tube, permitted the water to enter the tube and then awaited developments. Soon after when he regained the tube from the lake he found two bullheads on the inside. Their curiosity to determine the contents of the object had spelled their doom.

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgeslow

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JANET WILDE is the young and pretty daughter of Fenimore Wilde, one of Broadway's favorite actors. His son Frank is an idler and, like his father, a spendthrift. The girl has a hard time mothering them both. On the eve of a great opening night for her father, Janet accepts the proposal of Gordon Pryor, a young, but impetuous actor. In a restaurant she meets a young musician, Leonard Quigg, who attracts her. Janet's father drops dead after a brilliant performance, leaving her and her brother almost penniless. Gordon Pryor breaks his engagement and Janet realizes that it was her father's prestige and not love for her that prompted his proposal. The next day she interviews John Montague, famous theatrical impresario, and obtains the position of confidential secretary to him. Elated by her success she reaches home to find Leonard Quigg waiting for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIV.

JANET stood smiling at Leonard Quigg, with his dark good-looking face and black hair. He was still dressed in his shabby tweeds and was carrying his violin-case.

"And you hung up on me last night!" she said, her eyes twinkling with amusement.

"That's what I came round about," he explained with an engaging smile. "I didn't telephone, because I thought that you wouldn't see me, so Mary Ann and I came around to make our peace."

"Mary Ann? Who is she, and where is she?" Janet asked puzzled.

"The mistress of my heart," Leonard answered. "Here she is—bless her!"

"You mean your violin?" Janet queried.

"Yes—Mary Ann," he went on. "We're more or less inseparable you know. I shall never be a great violinist—I am really a composer, but Mary Ann and I have lots of fun together. Can we come up to your place and explain to you about last night?"

"Critic and I would be very glad to see Mary Ann and you," Janet said entering into his mood. "But perhaps that's not quite true."

"You won't be glad to see us?" he inquired politely.

"I will be, but I don't think Critic will," Janet answered. "I don't think Critic will like Mary Ann."

"Your dog? I remember! But don't you think he'd bear with Mary Ann while she explains to you what happened?"

"I'll make him shut up," Janet promised. "Come upstairs, Mr. Quigg, and bring Mary Ann with you."

"Don't you think you could call me Leonard, and let me call you Janet?" he asked.

"If you want it, Leonard—even if you did hang up on me," Janet smiled.

"But Mary Ann is going to explain that to you, with Critic's permission," he reminded her.

"Not until we have had some lunch," Janet insisted. "Would you like some scrambled eggs, or some scrambled eggs? If you don't care for them, I could give you some scrambled eggs."

"If I might ask for what I'd like, although I'm afraid you haven't got it, I'd like some scrambled eggs," he assured her. "Why is it that every type of artist always can talk nonsense?" Janet asked as she went into the kitchenette.

"Business men are too dignified," he suggested.

Janet turned round on him. "I ought to warn you," she said half-seriously, "that I am prejudiced in favor of business men. I am going to work for a cross between an artist and a business man—John Montague. He gave me a job this morning as his confidential secretary."

Leonard looked at her in complete silence.

"You don't say anything," she remarked as she broke some eggs into a bowl.

"I am twenty-five years old," he said. "The twenty-five years have taught me that it is useless to offer adverse criticism on anything a girl is going to do."

"And what have you got against John Montague?" she demanded with some heat.

"I don't like potatoes," he grinned at her. "I think it is colder than yesterday, and you should do your Christmas shopping early!"

"I think you're a very irritating young man," Janet said severely. Unfortunately just then she dropped an egg on the spotless floor.

"What a lot an egg can make of itself," Leonard observed aloud. "Give me your floor mop, and I'll do it."

They lunched on scrambled eggs and apples, and after they had had coffee, Leonard took his violin from its case.

"Mary Ann likes to be accompanied," he said as he took the instrument lovingly in his hands. "Still, she will do her best to explain why we had that misunderstanding over the telephone."

Janet sat, while he played to her, an elusive melody that she found charming.

"Do you understand now why I was so bad-tempered over the telephone just because you were cold to me?" Leonard asked.

Janet was quite sure that she did understand, but she didn't want to admit it. She was tired of love, and she wanted to be let alone. She liked Leonard, but it stopped there. She was going to be a very sensible girl. She was going to work hard, and learn all she could about theatrical producing, so that one day she would have an even better job. Love, so far, had brought her nothing but unhappiness, and she would be content with friendships.

She was tired of artists, and of their perpetual needs. She preferred a quiet, serious person, such as David Churchill. She would be glad to be friends with David. She would get to know men connected with the more serious professions, but she didn't intend to marry anyone—and certainly never an artist. If Leonard liked to come around occasionally—and be amusing—that would be all right. But no love affair, which meant heartaches!

So she wouldn't understand what Mary Ann had said to her. "Mary Ann was trying to tell you that having seen you at that restaurant, I have been unable to think of anyone else, so that when you were so very cold to me last night, naturally it made me mad. Is it clear?"

"And this is all very flattering," Janet went on directly. "But we should have an understanding if we are ever going to see each other again."

"You're going to tell me that you're engaged to that young actor," Leonard interrupted her. "I know that; but I don't see that it has anything to do with it. I can't help what I feel for you—and it isn't as though I were asking anything in return. I ask to be appointed the Royal Musician of your Court—can't I have that much?"

"I am not engaged any longer," Janet told him. "I was occupied in establishing that fact when you telephoned me last night. I asked you to hold the line until my ex-fiance had gone, so I suppose I was rather horrid in my tone, as I wasn't very pleased with any man at that moment. But wait a minute," she warned him, as she saw that he was about to rush onto an inevitable proposal. "I am not in the mood to listen to any sentiment from anyone. If you want to be—oh, just a good pal—I think you're quite nice, but I don't want you ever to forget that."

"Oh, that's quite easy," he flashed at her. All I have to do is to forget that I happen to adore you—and realize that I can just go out and fall in love with somebody else. In other words, I am to be—have like a cold-blooded fish, which would inevitably kill any music that I happen to have in my heart. That's very easy. Thank you so much!"

"Considering that I hardly know you," Janet answered not altogether unreasonably, "you really do seem to take things for granted. Why should I be interested in you particularly, or in your music?"

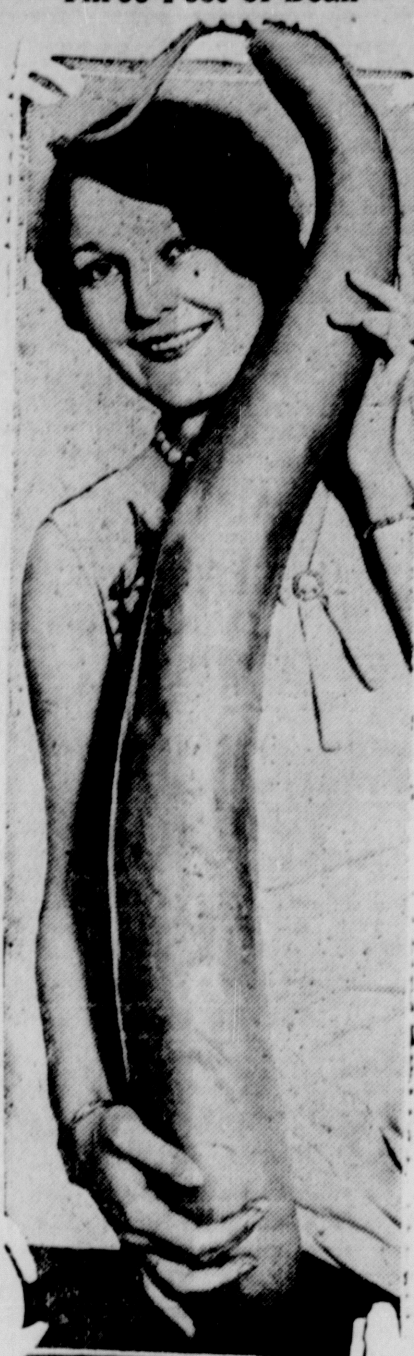

White with anger, he had reached the door. He flung it open, and then said with concentrated rage in his voice:

"There is no reason, as far as I know, why any woman should be anything but a hindrance to any artist!"

And for the second time that day, Janet heard an artist slam a door with all the emphasis possible.

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgeslow

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JANET WILDE is the young and pretty daughter of Fenimore Wilde, one of Broadway's favorite actors. His son Frank is an idler and, like his father, a spendthrift. The girl has a hard time mothering them both. On the eve of a great opening night for her father, Janet accepts the proposal of Gordon Pryor, a young but impecunious actor. In a restaurant she meets a young musician, Leonard Quigg, who attracts her. Janet's father drops dead after a brilliant performance, leaving her and her brother almost penniless. Gordon Pryor breaks his engagement and Janet realizes that it was her father's prestige and not love for her that prompted his proposal. The next day she interviews John Montague, famous theatrical impresario, and obtains the position of confidential secretary to him. Elated by her success she reaches home to find Leonard Quigg waiting for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIV.
JANET stood smiling at Leonard Quigg, with his dark good-looking face and black hair. He was still dressed in his shabby tweeds and was carrying his violin-case.

"And you hung up on me last night!" she said, her eyes twinkling with amusement.

"That's what I came round about," he explained with an engaging smile. "I didn't telephone, because I thought that you wouldn't see me, so Mary Ann and I came around to make our peace."

"Mary Ann? Who is she, and where is she?" Janet asked puzzled.

"The mistress of my heart," Leonard answered. "Here she is—bless her!"

"You mean your violin?" Janet queried.

"Yes—Mary Ann," he went on. "We're more or less inseparable you know. I shall never be a great violinist—I am really a composer, but Mary Ann and I have lots of fun together. Can we come up to your place and explain to you about last night?"

"Critic and I would be very glad to see Mary Ann and you," Janet said entering into his mood. "But perhaps that's not quite true."

"You won't be glad to see us?" he inquired politely.

"I will be, but I don't think Critic will," Janet answered. "I don't think Critic will like Mary Ann."

"Your dog? I remember! But don't you think he'd bear with Mary Ann while she explains to you what happened?"

"I'll make him shut up," Janet promised. "Come upstairs, Mr. Quigg, and bring Mary Ann with you."

"Don't you think you could call me Leonard, and let me call you Janet?" he asked.

"If you want it, Leonard—even if you did hang up on me," Janet smiled.

"But Mary Ann is going to explain that to you, with Critic's permission," he reminded her.

"Not until we have had some lunch," Janet insisted. "Would you like some scrambled eggs, or some scrambled eggs? If you don't care for them, I could give you some scrambled eggs."

"If I might ask for what I'd like, although I'm afraid you haven't got it, I'd like some scrambled eggs," he assured her. "Why is it that every type of artist always can talk nonsense?" Janet asked as she went into the kitchenette.

"Business men are too dignified," he suggested.

Janet turned round on him. "I ought to warn you," she said half-seriously, "that I am prejudiced in favor of business men. I am going to work for a cross between an artist and a business man—John Montague. He gave me a job this morning as his confidential secretary."

Leonard looked at her in complete silence.

"You don't say anything," she remarked as she broke some eggs into a bowl.

"I am twenty-five years old," he said. "The twenty-five years have taught me that it is useless to offer adverse criticism on anything a girl is going to do."

"And what have you got against John Montague?" she demanded with some heat.

"D'you like potatoes?" he grinned at her. "I think it is colder than yesterday, and you should do your Christmas shopping early!"

"I think you're a very irritating young man," Janet said severely. Unfortunately just then she dropped an egg on the spotless floor.

"What a lot an egg can make of itself," Leonard observed aloud. "Give me your floor mop, and I'll do it."

They lunched on scrambled eggs and apples, and after they had had coffee, Leonard took his violin from its case.

"Mary Ann likes to be accompanied," he said as he took the instrument lovingly in his hands. "Still, she will do her best to explain why we had that misunderstanding over the telephone."

Janet sat, while he played to her, an elusive melody that she found charming.

"Do you understand now why I was so bad-tempered over the telephone just because you were cold to me?" Leonard asked.

Janet was quite sure that she did understand, but she didn't want to admit it. She was tired of love, and she wanted to be let alone.

She liked Leonard, but it stopped there. She was going to be a very sensible girl. She was going to work hard, and learn all she could about theatrical producing, so that one day she would have an even better job. Love, so far, had brought her nothing but unhappiness, and she would be content with friendships.

She was tired of artists, and of their perpetual needs. She preferred a quiet, serious person, such as David Churchill. She would be glad to be friends with David. She would get to know men connected with the more serious professions, but she didn't intend to marry anyone—and certainly never an artist. If Leonard liked to come around occasionally—and he was amusing—that would be all right. But no love affair, which meant heartaches!

So she wouldn't understand what Mary Ann had said to her. "Mary Ann was trying to tell you that having seen you at that restaurant, I have been unable to think of anyone else, so that when you were so very cold to me last night, naturally it made me mad. Is it clear?"

"And this is all very flattering," Janet went on directly. "But we should have an understanding if we are ever going to see each other again."

"You're going to tell me that you're engaged to that young actor," Leonard interrupted her. "I know that; but I don't see that it has anything to do with it. I can't help what I feel for you—and it isn't as though I were asking anything in return. I ask to be appointed the Royal Musician of your Court—can't I have that much?"

"I am not engaged any longer," Janet told him. "I was occupied in establishing that fact when you telephoned me last night. I asked you to hold the line until my ex-fiance had gone, so I suppose I was rather horrid in my tone, as I wasn't very pleased with any man at that moment. But wait a minute," she warned him, as she saw that he was about to rush onto an inevitable proposal. "I am not in the mood to listen to any sentiment from anyone. If you want to be—oh, just a good pal—I think you're quite nice, but I don't want you ever to forget that."

"Oh, that's quite easy," he flashed at her. All I have to do is to forget that I happen to adore you—and realize that I can just go out and fall in love with somebody else. In other words, I am to behave like a cold-blooded fish, which would inevitably kill any music that I happen to have in my heart. That's very easy. Thank you so much!"

"Considering that I hardly know you," Janet answered not altogether unreasonably, "you really do seem to take things for granted. Why should I be interested in you particularly, or in your music?"

White with anger, he had reached the door. He flung it open, and then said with concentrated rage in his voice:

"There is no reason, as far as I know, why any woman should be anything but a hindrance to any artist!"

And for the second time that day, Janet heard an artist slam a door with all the emphasis possible.
